

FRIDAY, March 4, 2016

8:30-9:00 – Registration	Morning refreshments
8:55-9:00 – Eve Isham	Welcome
9:00-9:30 – Joy Geng	Individual category representations in the prefrontal cortex predict the efficiency of attentional selection
9:30-9:50 – Andrew X Stewart	Online classification of visual perception
9:50-10:10 – Felix Bacigalupo	The late positive potential (LPP) as a marker of conscious fear processing
10:10-10:35 – Arne Ekstrom	New frontiers in navigation and consciousness: The brain on teleportation and in highly immersive realistic virtual environment
10:35-10:40 ---break---
10:40-11:00 – Naomi Worth	Self-Narrative, Autobiographical Self, No Self: Theories of Consciousness from Social Psychology, Neuroscience and Buddhism
11:00-11:30 – Alyssa Ney	The empirical case for physicalism
11:30-12:00 – Michael Pitts	Inattention blindness and visual awareness without report
12:00-12:10 ---break---
12:10-1:00 – Christof Koch	The neural correlates of consciousness: Progress and problems
1:00-2:45 – Lunch & Posters	Complimentary lunch to the first 80 registrants
2:45-3:15 – Ezequiel Morsella	Passive Frame Theory: A new synthesis
3:15-3:45 – Steve Luck	Consciousness, cognitive flexibility, and the brain
3:45-4:05 – Daniel Toker	Putting Measures of Information Integration to the Test
4:05-4:15 ---break---
4:15-5:00 – Panel discussion	Does consciousness have a function?

SATURDAY, March 5, 2016

8:30-9:20 – Mentor Morning	An opportunity for students and postdocs to meet with the speakers in small groups
9:30-10:00 – David Edelman	Seeing far, biding time: cephalopod eyes and the evolution and function of consciousness
10:00-10:30 – Amy Kind	Consciousness and Imagination

10:30-10:50 – James Blackmon	Hemispherectomies, the Wada Test, and a Plurality of Minds
10:50-11:00 ---break---
11:00-11:30 – Paul Hastings	Pause and reflect: Does inhibitory control help children to be more self-aware?
11:30-12:00 – Tracey Kahan	Self-reflective consciousness in dreaming: An adaptive edge?
12:00-1:00 – Eve Isham	Awards / light refreshments / farewell